

ABSTRACT

5 A speech coding system is provided with time-domain noise attenuation. The speech coding system has an encoder operatively connected to a decoder via a communication medium. A preprocessor processes a digitized speech signal from an analog-to-digital converter. Speech coding systems are used to encode and decode a bitstream. Gains from the speech coding are adjusted by a gain factor G_f that provides time-domain background noise attenuation.